

The Kissalong Diaper Story

A Tale about What's Tops for Bottoms

Once upon a time,
there was a dining room.

The room was in a house. And the house was in Houston, Texas.

At a table in the dining room, a family
often ate wonderful meals. Something else wonderful happened at that table, too.
When no one was around, a mom sewed diapers for her little baby girl. The baby girl was named Kissa.

Kissa's mother loved her a heartful.

She wanted her little girl's soft bottom to be cradled in the finest diapers on the planet. So she made the diapers herself with special fabric and with extra love. She named the diapers "Kissaluvv" because each one wrapped her darling daughter in the most comfortable diaper anywhere.

As easy as pie.

Kissa's mother made pink and green and blue diapers. As her little girl grew, she made bigger diapers with strong plastic snaps that Kissa couldn't undo. When they were wet or dirty, she tossed them into the washer. She used them again and again.

Kissa loved her soft cloth diapers! There were no sharp pins to stick her. She never got a diaper rash. She wore them day and night.

All the moms wanted Kissaluvs.

When Kissa's friends came over to play, their moms were very surprised. "These diapers are so soft and so pretty! Did you wrap Kissa's bottom in a blankie?" they asked. "No," said Kissa's mother. "I made this diaper myself." All the mommies loved these new cloth diapers. They wanted their children to wear Kissaluvs. "These are cute and soft and easy to use. We will tell all our friends!" And they did.

Kissa's mother asked a few moms who were very good at sewing to help her make the special diapers. They made diapers every day. And the small business grew and grew.

Thinking big.

One day a mommy named Tashi discovered Kissaluvvs. She knew they were the best cloth diapers in the world. She knew that mommies liked to save money. She thought that children all over the world should have them. So Tashi told Kissa's mother that she knew how to make that happen.

Tashi had lots of big ideas. She would find ways to make lots more diapers. She could play cheerful music while the moms sewed. She could give them a big sunny place to work. After lunch, they could go home to be with their own children. And that is what she did.

Soon mothers all over America and in Spain and Scotland and France and Finland, too, wanted these wonderful diapers.

Babies deserve the very best!

All of the helpers worked hard to make Kissaluvvs. Tashi looked carefully at every single diaper to be sure it was perfect. After all, the children who would wear them were just as precious as her own little babies.

Tashi sold Kissaluvvs to stores around the world. Moms and dads bought them and washed them and snapped them snugly on their little ones. The babies were comfy and beautiful and handsome, too. Moms and dads saved lots of money. There were no trash bags filled with dirty diapers to pollute the environment. Everyone was happy!

A happy ending
that's just the beginning.

Tashi was happy, too, but she still kept thinking of ways to make the diapers even better. One idea was to make diapers of organic cotton and hemp, which make Kissaluv's even more absorbent, longer lasting and better fitting. Tashi also started making terry knit wipes for gently washing babies. And a Lotion Potion diaper spray that's fragrant like the great outdoors and makes changing babies more fun.

Every day, Tashi thinks about loving babies, helping families and respecting Mother Earth. So she'll probably never stop having new ideas. Yea for her!

A tiny bit more about Tashi Nibber.

Tashi lives in Houston, Texas and is the mother of two young boys. Kissaluvs are made two miles from her home. Growing up in India, Tashi learned that recycling saves money and is good for the earth. This is why she started her company.
