For me the New Year is all about renew, reuse, recycle and rejoice. Our recycle bins are filled to the brim, our waste basket is hardly ever full and last night I recycled our 2007 calendar into 12 beautiful envelopes!

In keeping with the "green theme" I'll tell you about a great cloth diaper. Kissaluv's, the family owned company is "dedicated to creating and providing excellent natural family products". For Tasha and Randy it all started in their dining room "with a fitted diaper for baby Kissa". Their products, now used world wide are produced by seamstresses in Houston Texas. Constantly striving for "smart responsible ways" to make their company work they use only US made fabrics, state of the art equipment and a facility which provides an excellent environment for their faithful employees. Their focus on recycling even includes donation of fabric scraps.

These diapers not only look good, they do the job. Choose a fitted or a contour diaper; the Kissaluv's web site explains the benefits of each. Each time they are washed they become more absorbent. There is never a need for fabric softeners; line drying in the sun is an option as well as laying them flat to dry naturally. If you live in the frozen north, feel free to use your dryer! Their elastic is soft and non binding, the threads are chosen for durability and the cotton fleece is ultra soft.

These diapers, designed to fit and grow with the baby come in three adjustable sizes. They conform to a child's build and are designed with a unique low rise front and full coverage in the back. The sturdy plastic snaps are easy for the changer to use but nearly impossible for the changee to open!

What could be better for you and your family than a superior cloth diaper, made in the US and kind to the entire planet? If you have not used a cloth diaper please start now and when you use a cloth diaper make sure it is Kissaluv's.
